The doubloons bore various dates some as far back as 1700.

He stated that the box also contained some papers, written in some foreign language, and one had a big seal on it. He promised to bring the papers to the reporter to get them deciphered, as he was no "schollard," he said.

He was asked when he intended opening the kegs and the other

"I'm in no hurry. They can wait. Even if they ain't got anything of value that wooden box has a fortune for me. How much is a doubloon worth anyhow?"

"About $15." "Then I've got over 1000 of them, besides the jewelry."

He gave the reporter permission
